Otto describes a cruel reality that surpasses all fiction.

Hans-Dieter Otto tells of the worst disasters in human history from antiquity to the present day: from massive earthquakes and volcanic eruptions, huge storms and cyclones, which humans seem just as unprepared for as famine and devastating epidemics. Is there really no heaven watching over us? This book describes what the accidents meant for each affected civilization; the many that perished and the ones who managed to return to normal. A readable, shattering kaleidoscope through suffering and misery and the terrible helplessness of man. Hans-Dieter Otto, born in 1937 in Berlin, is a lawyer and non-fiction author who lives in Ahrensburg. His "Encyclopedia of Miscarriages of Justice" (2003) became a bestseller, followed by "In the name of Error: Errors of Judgment in Murder Trials" (2006...

HANS-DIETER OTTO

born in 1937 in Berlin, lives as a jurist and non-fiction author in Ahrensburg, Germany. His "Lexikon der Justizirrtümer" (Encyclopedia of Errors of Justice, 2003) was an Austrian bestseller and was followed by a book on miscarriages of justice in murder cases ("Im Namen des Irrtums: Fehlurteile in Mordprozessen", 2006) and another one on murders that remained unpunished ("Lexikon der ungesühnten Morde", 2007). His interest in the country's military history led to books such as "Lexikon der militärischen Irrtümer" (Encyclopedia of Military Errors, 2004) und „Verblüffende Siege: Die größten Überraschungscoups der Kriegsgeschichte (Surprising Victories: War History's Greatest Coups, 2010)".
